Request Summary

Requested Amount	$20,000.00
Support Type	General Operating Support
Project Title	Community Mental Health Needs
Project/Program Description	Support from the Marini Family Trust will sustain and strengthen Hanna Center's Mental Health Hub, a community-based program serving youth, families, and adults across Sonoma Valley. Since launching in 2023, the Hub has more than doubled its client load--reflecting both deepening need and the trust Hanna has earned among underserved populations. Clinicians care for individuals of all ages though youth and families remain at the core of our mission. Many of the young people we serve are navigating trauma, instability, or systemic neglect. For too many traditional mental health services are delayed, confusing, or simply unavailable. The Mental Health Hub removes these barriers and provides therapy, crisis response, and support groups. The Marini Family Trust funds would directly support core clinical operations--helping cover the cost of therapists, bilingual services, and intake coordination for youth and families. Your support keeps care timely, inclusive, and trauma-informed.

Common Goals

Hanna Center's commitment to vulnerable youth and families continues to reflect the spirit of service embodied by Mr. Marini and his decades of work with young people at the Boys' Club in San Francisco. We share the belief that every child--regardless of their circumstances--deserves support, guidance, and a safe place to land.

The Marini Family Trust and Hanna Center both understand that positive change begins with connection. Just as Mr. Marini mentored youth facing hardship, Hanna's clinicians walk alongside young people as they navigate grief, trauma, anxiety, and systemic challenges.

Your support makes it possible for us to meet these youth where they are--without stigma and without delay. Together, we are creating space for healing, growth, and long-term well-being--one relationship at a time.

4:45 PM Wells Fargo Philanthropic Services - Review Your Application persistent gaps in mental health access, especially for lowincome families and youth of color. According to the 2021 Portrait of Sonoma County, youth in the region report high rates of anxiety, depression, and suicide ideation, compounded by trauma from poverty, displacement, and climate disasters. Emergency visits for opioid-related overdoses have more than doubled since 2016. Many of the young people Hanna serves come from Sonoma Valley neighborhoods with limited social supports or are referred from other counties after struggling in foster care, juvenile justice, or traditional school systems. Hanna's system of care is often the only coordinated, trauma-informed option available to these youth and families.

Project Details

Project/Program Objectives	At the heart of this work is a simple but powerful belief: that mental health care should be accessible, affordable, and grounded in relationships. For too many families in our region, this is still not the case. Without our program, these clients face long waitlists, confusing eligibility processes, or no pathway to care at all.

To meet this challenge, the Mental Health Hub integrates licensed clinical care with Community Health Workers (CHWs) -- trained, bilingual staff who serve as the bridge between families and services. CHWs build trust, identify barriers to access, provide culturally attuned support, and ensure that clients stay connected throughout their care journey. They help clients schedule appointments, follow treatment plans, and access referrals for housing, food, transportation, and more. This blend of clinical care and navigation support ensures that care is not only available -- it is reachable.

The objectives of Hanna's Mental Health and Wellness programs are:

Expand Access to Care: Provide no-cost or low-cost mental health services to a growing number of clients, with a special focus on youth and families who fall outside of traditional coverage systems.

Deliver Trauma-Informed Services: Offer therapy, support groups, and crisis intervention using best practices in trauma recovery, adolescent development, and culturally responsive care.

Strengthen Bilingual and Bicultural Support: Ensure all services -- clinical and community-based -- are available in both English and Spanish, delivered by a diverse team that reflects the communities we serve.

Integrate Community Health Workers: Leverage the expertise of CHWs to reach vulnerable populations, reduce stigma around mental health, and increase client retention and follow-through.

Partner with Local Systems: Collaborate with schools, nonprofits, and public agencies to ensure coordinated care for clients with complex needs, especially youth in the foster care or juvenile justice systems.

Build Sustainable Infrastructure: Invest in the long-term staffing, data systems, and clinical supervision needed to support an expanding client base without compromising quality of care.

Implementation Plan

Hanna Center will implement the Mental Health and Wellness Program through an integrated model combining clinical care, community-based outreach, and sustained operational infrastructure. The cornerstone of this work is the Community Mental Health Hub, which serves as both a care delivery site and a regional connector for trauma-informed mental health services in Sonoma Valley.

The following activities and staffing will guide the program's implementation:

1. Direct Service Delivery: The Mental Health Hub will continue to provide outpatient mental health services to youth, families, and adults of all genders, with a focus on high-barrier populations.

Core services will include: Individual, family, and group therapy; Crisis intervention and short-term stabilization; Coordinated care planning and referrals

All services will be provided in both English and Spanish and available on a sliding scale.

2. Community Health Worker Integration: Our bilingual, bicultural Community Health

Workers (CHWs) will be responsible for outreach, navigation, and follow-up. Each CHW builds long-term relationships with clients, assists with referrals (e.g., housing, food, transportation), and ensures that families remain connected to care even during crisis or transition periods. CHWs also reduce stigma around mental health in traditionally underserved communities by engaging directly with clients where they live, work, and go to school.

3. Intake and Eligibility Navigation: The Hub's intake and administrative team will guide new clients through assessment, eligibility verification, and matching with appropriate clinical staff or external resources. This includes helping families navigate complex systems such as insurance registration, which often exclude or delay mental health care.

By ensuring a smooth and supportive entry point to services, the intake process plays a critical role in equitable access.

4. Clinical Staff and Supervision: The Mental Health Hub is staffed by licensed therapists, registered associates, and clinical trainees, all of whom receive trauma-informed care training and ongoing professional supervision. Clinical services are overseen by Hanna's Clinical Director, a licensed LMFT with deep experience in youth mental health.

Hanna is committed to staff sustainability, offering benefits, competitive salaries, and regular supervision to reduce burnout and improve care quality.

5. Data and Evaluation: All clinical encounters, progress notes, and outcome measures will be tracked using the Hub's

HIPAA-compliant electronic health record (EHR) system. Key metrics will include:

Number of clients served

Insurance status (uninsured/underinsured)

Therapy retention and completion rates

Demographic data (age, language, income level)

Regular reviews inform continuous quality improvement. The Director of Outcomes and Evaluation oversees data analysis and uses Results-Based Accountability (RBA) to identify trends and adapt service delivery.

6. Community and School Partnerships: Hanna Center will maintain active partnerships with Sonoma Valley Unified School District, Boys & Girls Clubs, Sonoma Valley Hospital, and other youth-serving agencies. Through these relationships, the Hub receives warm referrals, coordinates care plans, and helps build a network of support for young people who might otherwise fall through the cracks.

Measuring Success

Hanna Center measures the success of its Mental Health and Wellness Program through a combination of clinical outcomes, access metrics, client engagement, and system coordination. Our goal is not only to track how many people we serve, but how meaningfully we support healing, equity, and long-term wellness for the youth and families who rely on us.

We begin by assessing access and reach. The Mental Health Hub was built to serve those who are too often excluded from traditional care systems -- particularly uninsured or underinsured youth and families, and Spanish-speaking households.

We track the number of clients served, the percentage with limited or no insurance, language demographics, and average time from intake to first appointment. High demand and growing enrollment -- especially among first-time users of mental health services -- indicate that the Hub is breaking through barriers to care.

To track clinical progress, we use a mix of self-reported tools and clinician assessments to measure improvement in symptoms like anxiety, depression, trauma response, and family conflict. Clients work with clinicians to set personalized goals, and we monitor progress through our electronic health record (EHR) system using validated screening tools. Whenever possible, we also invite client feedback through surveys and listening sessions, particularly from Spanish-speaking families and youth, to shape program improvements from the inside out.

Another key success indicator is coordination across systems. The Hub is designed not only to provide therapy, but to connect clients to broader networks of care--the primary work of CHWs. We track warm referrals to housing, food, school supports, and healthcare, and monitor how often we participate in multi-agency case planning. By helping clients navigate overlapping systems -- from public health to education to juvenile probation -- we reduce fragmentation and help families access resources that are often out of reach.

Collaboration

Hanna Center's Mental Health and Wellness Program is rooted in strong community partnerships that make our services more accessible, coordinated, and responsive. While we provide clinical care directly through our Mental Health Hub, we know that no single agency can address the complex needs of young people and families in isolation. Our collaborative model ensures that clients receive holistic support across education, health, and social systems.

One of our most vital partnerships is with the Sonoma Valley Unified School District (SVUSD). Hanna Center provides direct therapy and behavioral health services to students across multiple SVUSD school sites, including co-located clinicians on campus and warm handoffs to our Community Mental Health Hub for more intensive or long-term care.

We maintain a strong relationship with the Sonoma County Office of Education, which helps align our services with broader countywide initiatives around student wellness, trauma-informed practices, and equity in school-based mental health access. Our staff are often invited to participate in professional development opportunities and joint planning sessions with county education leaders.

Through our formal agreements with the County of Sonoma, we provide outpatient therapy for youth covered under Medi-Cal and Enhanced Care Management (ECM) programs. This includes coordination with Child Welfare Services and access to Apricot, the county's data reporting system. Our clinical staff are trained in Anti-Racist Results-Based Accountability (RBA), and our outcomes team regularly collaborates with county analysts to ensure program alignment with public health goals.

We also collaborate with the Sonoma County Probation Department, particularly for youth in diversion or re-entry. These referrals often include young people at high risk of recidivism, school dropout, or substance use. Hanna's trauma-informed and relationship-centered approach allows us to serve as a stabilizing force, providing therapy, mentorship, and system navigation for youth involved in juvenile justice.

The Sonoma Valley Hospital is a key partner in bridging the gap between medical and mental health care. In this developing partnership, Hanna receive referrals to provide mental health services and support not available at the hospital for at-risk clients.

Project/Program Background

Hanna Center has been caring for the mental health and wellbeing of young people for more than 75 years. Following the implementation of a new strategic vision for a more sustainable organization, the Community Mental Health Hub opened in 2023 on Hanna's Sonoma Valley campus. Since then, it has been growing steadily, and in the past year alone, has nearly doubled its client load and expanded community partnerships to reach more broadly and deeply into the community. With additional demand and Hanna is increasing capacity, Hanna anticipates continued expansion in the year to come.

Hanna Center has an active partnership with the Boys & Girls Clubs of Sonoma Valley, where one of our clinicians provides on-site services to youth. This allows us to reach youth who may not otherwise enter the formal mental health system and to provide early intervention in a trusted, familiar setting.

These collaborations are both formal and deeply relational. They allow us to integrate services, reduce fragmentation, and ensure that families navigating complex challenges are not doing so alone. They are essential to the success and sustainability of our Mental Health and Wellness Program -- and help us extend the impact of every dollar invested in community care.
